"At the Threshold of Life"—This picture, produced under the auspices of the National Kindergarten association, is a picture with an educational purpose; tells a heart-interesting story and a good one.

It's a picture that stirs human feelings and affections. Made with a purpose behind it, letting in light on the main subject by means of a compellingly interesting story. It is said there are four million little children in the United States who are wasting the most impressionable and elastic period of their lives in ignorance and degradation, and all for the lack of the kindergarten adjunct to our school system.

If humanity at large owes any duty, it is to give the child a fair start in life. This story hinges upon this very theme. It's at Dreamland.
